AN IMPORTANT NOTICE

This work, like all the standard Marquis biographical reference publications, is not merely an alphabetical arrangement of biographical data. And it is not a mere compilation of the names of those responding to mailings to lists obtainable from the mailing list concerns and other sources. When there is no rigorous enforcement of a selective standard which assures inclusion of the listings necessary to coverage of basic reference requirements, no reference standing, completeness or worth can result.

Its compilation has been so patterned that this work will serve usefully and effectively in private or public libraries as a sound biographical reference tool. Biographees have been painstakingly searched out who fall under the unique measures of reference incidence carefully assembled at large expense by The A. N. Marquis Company to meet its standards for selection resulting from a half century of specialized biographical reference experience.

Exploitation in any manner whatsoever of the names herein, thus selected and under which the biographical sketches appear alphabetically, is beyond the fair uses intended in the sale of the work, and in certain obvious circumstances, if damage follows to the publisher from a misappropriation of his time and expense expended in their selection, may bring legal action.

In respect to those selected for inclusion in the work, the great majority of whom have by making biographical data available cooperated in assuring the completeness vital to actual reference use, this notice is directed toward fending off on their behalf use of their names as canvassing and mailing lists; in respect to others, its purpose is obvious.

PREFACE

The function of a biographical reference compilation, such as this Fifth International—and Tenth Anniversary—Edition of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY, is to serve work-a-day reference consultation. It follows, therefore, that a worthwhile compilation must contain biographical data on all those individuals—or on as nearly all as is practically possible—about whom there is, in the judgement of experienced reference technicians, a known or anticipated reference interest.

It is its success in meeting this reference demand—and its concentration on meeting it—that singles out the reference-useful compilation from the "vanity book" listing only what some of those circularized by its publishers want to see published about themselves, plus a sprinkling of extremely noteworthy names for "window dressing." And it is over 50 years' concentration on producing just such reference-useful compilations that has made the Marquis biographical reference works standard in their field and brought significance to the phrase "Listed by Marquis."

One of these compilations is WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY, every edition of which since coming under the Marquis imprimatur has been compiled with the definite goal in view of bringing to the vastly important and influential field of business —which engages the time and energies of over one-fifth of the population of the United States—a truly reference-useful compilation of biographical data about the most noteworthy and the most asked-about business men and women the world over. The fact that each succeeding edition finds more business men discovering its value as a day-to-day reference tool—and so assuring the editors by an ever-increasing number of commendatory letters—indicates that the goal is being attained.

And a difficult goal it is to attain. For in the case of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY the application of the Marquis procedure of establishing the incidence of reference interest first, and then selecting biographees so placed in respect to it as to be of actual or potential reference interest, is exceptionally difficult and complex.

The concern with comparatively small financial resources may be of national interest, and, therefore, its principal executive also. A specialist or key executive in a large enterprise may rank in terms of actual or potential reference interest abreast of the titular "tops" in the organization. Thus the compilative problem becomes one of disregarding—yet observing for purposes of coverage completeness—mere size or position, and searching out, always in terms of actual or potential reference interest, both "key" business and "key" individuals in those businesses, while at the same time listing as a matter of course principals of concerns of considerable size.

To this end the admission standards described in greater detail on page 14 of this first section have been set up and followed rigidly in an effort to bring this Tenth Anniversary Edition as closely as possible to realization of them. But perfection is indeed difficult to reach in a field fraught with the complexities described above, and under conditions, indicative of the times, which make compilation almost as arduous a task as actual physical production, what with shortages in manpower and brainpower equally as evident as those in production facilities and materials.

Another obstacle the editors have met—and which has been present in varying degrees since the first compilation of an International Business Who's Who was undertaken—is the peculiar reticence on the part of business men—a reticence evidenced to a much higher degree in this field than in any other—toward supplying the customary biographical data. Perhaps the business man is more pressed for time, perhaps he is actually less familiar with "words in print" and the widespread consultation directed to modern biographical reference works in our libraries—than, say, the professor, the author, or the clergyman—or perhaps he is merely "better insulated" by employees handicapped by that same unfamiliarity with the biographical reference tools now part of every library's standard equipment." Whatever the reason, the editors have found it a considerably more painstaking and time-consuming task to elicit from them the "autobiographical" data so essential to a reference-useful compilation.

This obstacle has been met with greater success, however, in the new Fifth Edition than heretofore. Where it has not been, what biographical data there existed readily to hand or could be brought to light by research has been utilized to present as complete a sketch as possible. Such sketches, and those from the previous edition which could not be verified for the current edition, have been designated by an asterisk (*). Furthermore, a relatively small number of non-current listings, which could neither be confirmed through personal checking addressed to the biographee nor amended by fresh research, have been dropped altogether in an effort to maintain the reference-currency of the compilation.

Perhaps the most perplexing task of all faced by the editors in compiling the new Fifth Edition was "reconversion" to a truly international coverage. War-time conditions necessitated in the Fourth Edition merely reprinting foreign biographies from the Third Edition. However, even though compilation for this Fifth Edition began before V-E day, the editors were determined to resume as great a degree of international coverage as could reasonably be expected under the circumstances.

Sometimes the results were disheartening. Again, when requests to Europeans for down-to-date data actually reached their destination and elicited a response, the result was often not only disheartening, but heart-breaking. One sketch was returned from France with this blunt statement: "Assassinated by Nazis, April, 1944." Another, from England, carried nothing but the terse notation, "Business demolished."

As a whole, however, the response from war-ravaged countries was surprising, and it is possible to present in this edition a coverage of noteworthy foreign business leaders which, though it cannot yet pretend to the degree of completeness attained in coverage of Americans, nonetheless assures the Fifth Edition full justification for its "International" sub-title. To this end, a certain number of reference-worthy foreign sketches which could not be verified by personal correspondence, but which could be checked through other sources, have been included and so indicated with an asterisk.

Furthermore, a special inquiry was made of American business men sketched to discover those most interested in foreign trade or other aspects of international business. The sketches of those expressing such an interest have been designated with a double dagger (‡).

Compilation of the Sixth International Edition has even now begun, with particular attention to the international scope of the volume, and the editors are already assured that in it they can present a foreign coverage fully as complete as to "key" reference-worthy business men not resident in the United States as the American coverage presented in this edition. Meanwhile, they feel equally assured that the latter coverage in this Tenth Anniversary Edition, plus the "hand-picked" selection of foreign business leaders, will add materially in ranking it as even a more valuable business reference tool than its predecessors.

In compiling this edition the editors have had the assistance and cooperation of numerous business organizations and associations, governmental agencies, and foreign consulates and trade bureaus. To them their thanks and appreciation are here extended, and, as well, to the many individuals who have cooperated with suggestions and recommendations, and, lastly, to the biographees themselves without whose cooperation the compilation of this Fifth International—and Tenth Anniversary—Edition of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY would hardly have been possible.

WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY

AT ITS DAY TO DAY WORK

The clear-cut distinction between a "vanity book" listing what some of those circularized by its publisher want to see printed about themselves . . . and a reference-useful compilation of those experienced editors judge its consultants are likely to inquire about . . . is perhaps most decisively apparent to users, since they will find in the reference-serviceable compilation an appreciated tool . . . exactly as these typical users of "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" found it to be:

HEAD OF AN INTERNATIONALLY-KNOWN BUSINESS:

May I congratulate you on . . . "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry"? We are finding it of increasing value as a very useful business tool.

AN ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT:

I have . . . constant use for my copy of "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" . . .

HEAD OF A PUBLIC ORGANIZATION:

"Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" is a book I am always glad to have in my office . . .

DEPARTMENT HEAD IN A LARGE INSTITUTION:

I wish to express . . . appreciation of "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" especially . . . all your publications are indispensable.

A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL:

. . . "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" is going to be tremendously useful . . . in "unwinding" and reconversion. It is extremely worth-while.

LIBRARIAN FOR A BUSINESS IMPORTANT IN WORLD-WIDE TRADE:

"Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" has been found very helpful in supplying . . . information for our executives.

PRESIDENT OF HEAVY MACHINERY HOUSE:

I find "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" a very useful book.

A MANUFACTURER:

I . . . see the need of "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" and will be using it on a number of occasions.

Among the noteworthy in the commerce of most countries, "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" exemplifies the distinctive meaning of Listed by Marquis. That a useful and appreciated reference tool, particularly serviceable in day-to-day business usage, results is demonstrated by the typical comments of users above.

TABLE OF ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are frequently used in this compilation:

* Following a sketch signifies that either the published biography could not be verified, or that at least temporary non-currency in respect to general reference interest has been indicated by lack of change in the data or failure to receive requested information.

‡Following a sketch signifies that the biographee has expressed an especial interest in one or more aspects of foreign trade.

ALPHABETIZATION PRACTICES

Names are arranged alphabetically according to the surnames, and under identical surnames according to the first given name. If both surname and first given name are identical, names are arranged alphabetically according to the second given name. Where full names are identical, they are arranged in order of age—those of the elder being put first.

Surnames beginning with De, Des, Du, etc., however capitalized or spaced, are recorded with the prefix preceding the surname and arranged alphabetically under the letter D.

Surnames beginning with Mac are arranged alphabetically under M. This likewise holds for names beginning with Mc; that is, all names beginning Mc will be found in alphabetical order after those beginning Mac.

Surnames beginning with St. (Saint) are all arranged before names beginning Sta and are themselves arranged according to the second part of the surname (St Clair before St. Dennis). Names prefixed with Saint (spelled out) are arranged in regular alphabetical order.

Surnames beginning with prefix Van are arranged alphabetically under letter V.

Surnames containing the prefix Von or von are usually arranged alphabetically under letter V; any exceptions are noted by cross references (Von Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard; see Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard von).

The five specific practices last above mentioned, which differ from the procedures followed by many reference centers and publishing organizations, have been adapted in the belief that every day use of a biographical compilation is as a result facilitated.

Compound hyphenated surnames are arranged according to the first member of the compound.

Compound unhyphenated surnames common in Spanish are not separated and are treated as hyphenated names

Since Chinese names have the family name first, they are so arranged, but without comma between family name and given name (as Lin Yutang).

Parentheses used in connection with a name indicate which part of the full name is usually deleted in common usage. Hence Abbott, W(illiam) Lewis indicates that the usual form of the given names is W. Lewis. In alphabetizing this type the parentheses are not considered However if the name is recorded Abbott, (William) Lewis, signifying that the entire name William is not commonly used, the alphabetizing would be arranged as though the name were Abbott, Lewis.

WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST

Volume II

(The first under Marquis editorship)

Over 20,000 Biographees

Full Cloth Over 1500 Pages

(Now in Compilation)

FEATURES—

AREA COVERAGE: Volume II of WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST will present complete coverage, based on the proved-by-experience Marquis system of selection, of those of sectional or national reference interest because of noteworthy achievement in all reputable fields of endeavor and who live or follow their vocations within the area comprising New England, the Middle Atlantic States, and the District of Columbia.

ALL DATA REVISED TO DATE: The new edition of WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST will represent a thorough revision to bring down-to-date all Volume I sketches selected for listing by Marquis and to integrate into the compilation several thousand new sketches, each checked for currency immediately prior to publication. The total number of biographical sketches will exceed 22,000 for this first Marquis edition.

TYPOGRAPHY AND PRESENTATION: This edition will be reset from cover to cover in the standard Marquis type-face and format proved through checking by reference technicians to be best adapted to reference use. Furthermore, sketches will be compiled in the concise and to-the-point style long characteristic of all Marquis biographical reference compilations.

SIZE: A new size adapted to home, office or reference library use will be utilized for the new edition—9¼ inches high by 7⅜ inches wide, and approximately 2⅝ inches thick.

BIOGRAPHIES

ADMISSION STANDARDS FOR THIS COMPILATION

Except for names which are included in this compilation for one or more of the arbitrary reasons designated below, the aim is to include the names, not necessarily of the best, but rather of the best-known, men and women the world over in all lines of useful and reputable commercial and industrial endeavor—names much in the public eye generally throughout the business world. The standards of admission divide the eligible into two classes: (1) those selected on account of special prominence in their particular branch of business, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion in the business world; and (2) those included arbitrarily on account of positions held in commercial and industrial concerns of certain sizes or "rating" standings.

Class One

The first of these two classes comprises persons who have accomplished some conspicuous achievement—something out of the ordinary, so to speak—something which distinguishes them from the vast majority of their business contemporaries. This class is confined to those so identified with affairs of commerce and industry as to be subject to wide inquiry or discussion. Names frequently appear of those who are broadly prominent in some special field, but who are little known in their own countries. The man whose commercial relations may spread far may be scarcely known in the particular locality in which he lives. He is often a person whose business specialization is better known than himself, and it is pertinent information concerning such an individual that the compilators aim to gather and disseminate.

Arbitrary Class

The arbitrary class embraces, without regard to notability or prominence in any other respect, the following: the principals of commercial and industrial concerns capitalized at or above a certain figure; the principals of business organizations of the type not readily judged on capitalization alone, but of high commercial "rating"; principals of the leading firms engaged in international commerce or finance; principals of non-American businesses of particular interest to American businessmen; and principals of a select list of highly specialized American concerns of wide interest because of the type of their work, or the nature of their products, regardless of their size in terms of capital or plant.
